The Rindge Conservation Corps is a group of active volunteers that assists the Conservation Commission with its responsibility of maintaining and preserving Rindge's natural resources. The Conservation Corps is composed of residents, non-residents and students who want to enhance the quality of life in Rindge by focusing on development and/or improvements to conservation areas, hiking trails and other environmental protection or educational activity. Corps members contribute volunteer time and work efforts to various projects during the course of a year when called upon by the Conservation Commission.
